Friday 29 October 2021

Good morning everyone

Last Sunday (October 24) was World Mission Sunday. On that day the global Church came together to support mission efforts during October which is designated as World Mission Month. It has been great to hear of the wonderful initiatives happening in our schools to raise awareness and funds for the Missions during Mission Month, particularly the uptake of the Socktober activities. Through these activities our students give witness to our Catholic social teaching that calls us to have a preferential option for the poor. The nurturing in our school communities of a culture of compassion and kindness is fundamental to a Catholic education. Congratulations and heartfelt thanks to all involved in organising and implementing these generous initiatives in our kindergartens, primary schools and colleges.

Our Year 12s are now well into their final examination period, and I know you would join me in wishing them every success for the remainder of their assessment. I also wish those Year 12s who are continuing their traineeships and work preparation all the best in these final weeks of the school year. As educators, we strive to ensure all our students grow in faith, knowledge and wisdom through prayer, the pursuit of academic excellence and the fostering of skills that will stand them in good stead for their life's journey. I hope and pray this has been the experience for the Senior class of 2021 and I offer my heartfelt congratulations and thanks for the great contribution they have made to Catholic Education in the Diocese of Rockhampton.

This week I attended the National Catholic Education Commission (NCEC) Directors' gathering to hear updates on funding and School Improvement and information on key election issues in the education sector from NCEC Executive Director Jacinta Collins. Discussions included political advocacy strategies, the importance of consistent messaging, funding commitments, early years education and religious freedom. Please pray for our Catholic Education representatives engaging with leaders and decision-makers responsible for establishing party platforms, that their efforts will result in positive outcomes for all in our school communities.

In continuing bicentennial celebrations for Catholic Education in Australia and to mark World Teachers' Day, I was very pleased to attend the Faith in the Future Virtual Symposium this week, hosted by NCEC. The panel discussion, moderated by Australian broadcaster Geraldine Doogue, included a keynote address by internationally acclaimed education researcher, author and practitioner, Dr Lyn Sharratt titled This is the Work. The event provided some thought-provoking perspectives and conversations on the education landscape and the contribution of Catholic Education historically, now and into the future.

Today we celebrate World Teachers' Day and say thank you to all our wonderful teachers for their dedication and commitment to their vocation. I offer my sincere appreciation to all our teachers for the great work you do each and every day to ensure students in our kindergartens, schools and colleges grow in knowledge and faith in a safe and caring environment. I am constantly inspired by the commitment our teachers have for their school communities and to teaching as an honoured profession.

We also celebrate Day for Daniel today, Australia's largest child safety education and awareness day. Our partnership with the Morcombe Foundation has greatly assisted in making our school communities safer and I commend the Day for Daniel resources and information to you and encourage your participation in this worthwhile initiative.

Next week we celebrate All Saints' Day (1 November) when Catholics remember and venerate saints from around the world throughout history, known and unknown. The inspirational lives of these men and women mirror Christ's message of love and mercy and show us how to respond to our call to holiness. May we draw strength, guidance, and encouragement from their courageous example as we too seek to understand God's plan for us through our roles in Catholic Education and personally as followers of Christ.

God bless,

Leesa
